MEDIA ADVISORY

National Academy of Public Administration Hosts Forum on Stabilizing the Workforce in an Uncertain Future

WASHINGTON, DC – The National Academy of Public Administration this week will host a forum on Stabilizing the Workforce in an Uncertain Future.

This forum will address workforce issues in an environment of anticipated government reorganization, transformation and workforce reduction. The forum will also discuss best practices and lessons learned from successful management efforts.

Terry Gerton, President and CEO of the Academy and Steve Maier, President of Management Concepts will each give opening remarks. The forum will lead with a discussion of the findings from a recent survey entitled, “Overview and Results of the 2017 CLO/CHCO survey: The State of Training Opportunities Within the Government Today.”

Amy Benson Rogers, Director of the Treasury Executive Institute at the U.S. Treasury Department, will deliver the keynote address. The forum also will include two panel discussions: “Change Management/Performance Improvement” and “What Can Governments Do to Successfully Practice Change Management in an Uncertain Future?”
